Do you remember the murder case in New York where the man stated that his dog told him to do it? Or the 1979 trial of the "vampire" killer? Both were convicted and sent to prison. The question of their sanity remained mostly outside the court in lunchrooms, newspapers, and saloons. There are untold numbers of persons accused of crimes where the evidence against them is overwhelming and they cry, "I don't remember a thing." Everyone talks about these accused as "crazy." And yet no court will admit that.

Professional psychics see these "crazy" people regularly. Only they are called trance mediums.

There are several thousand murder cases tried each year in which defense attorneys are literally bogged down with the effort of finding a workable defense.

The common pleas of not guilty by "reason of insanity" or "diminished capacity" were a defense attorney's nightmare. Only 2 percent of the cases were defensible with those pleas according to the lawyers and almost none succeeded. The unusual success of the "diminished capacity" defense of the 1979 Dan White murder trial caused much publicity. An otherwise wholesome young man who was respected in the community was convicted of voluntary manslaughter instead of murder in the killings of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk. White was excused by the jury because of the "severe mental depression" he was temporarily experiencing. Most juries will not excuse killings on this type of defense.

Although the jawing and gum flapping about Dan White's trial will go on in law courts and classrooms for many years to come, no one truly addresses the question of the state of the mind or the state of the spirit of the accused.

It is interesting to note that the knee-jerk politicians ran to make cosmetic changes in the laws when public opinion mounted against the San Francisco jury's decision. In 1981, SB 54 (added to section 28 of the Penal Code) disallowed any more pleas of "diminished capacity, diminished responsibility, irresistible impulse" or, in other words, by reason of insanity. The law does make it seem even tougher to plead crazy: "although there is evidence of mental disease, mental defect, or mental disorder, it does not mean a person is incapable of intent."

All this excess verbiage and creation of a new section may have placated the public guilt. But amendments to section 26 of the Penal Code seem to restore the damage done by the addition of section 28:

"All persons are capable of committing a crime", it says, "except:

1. children under 14 unless there is clear proof knowing wrong
2. idiots
3. under ignorance or mistake of fact

4. without being conscious
5. through misfortune or accident when there was no evil design
6. under threat or menace of life endangerment."

They threw out exceptions for "lunatics and insane persons" to further inhibit the "crazy" plea.

Yet there still remain considerations for those not conscious of the act committed: somnambulism (sleep walking) and blows on the head. Unconsciousness can not refer anymore to "insanity" but can mean suffering from fever or drug.

What does all this semantic legal fol-de-rol mean? It seems to us that the public emotions are running high about menacing crimes and low about doing anything to effectively remove cause.

The accused are usually judged on 1) their capability to "willingly and independently and knowingly" carry out a crime and 2) having some capacity to "conform one's behavior to the requirements of the law."

These are important points for a trance medium. But the arguments don't go far enough. Let's look at Arne Johnson, 19:

The Connecticut youth, sympathetic to and exasperated by the demonic possession of David, his girlfriend's 11-year-old brother, called the devils to task; "take me on instead," he yelled. And the evil spirits did. Having choked David and changed his body to a growling, groveling animal at times, they did the same to Arne. Once the demons in David chased and threatened his grandmother with a knife. Tragically, they used Arne's body to kill his best friend. Arne was sent to prison November 24, 1981.

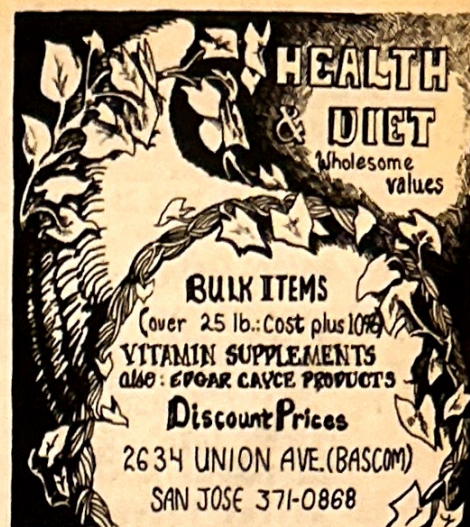

Arne can't remember a thing about the murder. Although Catholic priests exorcised the family and famous psychic researchers Ed and Lorraine Warren validated the possessions, the court would allow none of it, ("unscientific," "irrelevant").

This issue of Psychic Life is about trance mediums - human beings who are programmed genetically and spiritually to allow another being into the body. This is a psychic ability. Gone crazy or out of control, it is a spiritual problem. Legally, society isn't ready to admit the problem. Juries and ultimately society itself would have to take a good hard look in the mirror.

Too bad, but we haven't evolved that far yet.

NOTE: Psychics are not writers. Written here are thoughts and spiritual experiences for which the academic, journalistic, community has sanctioned no language. Please read between the lines. We are not grammarians. ✱

Note of appreciation: Trance mediums are found in all walks of life; waitresses, accountants, teachers, homemakers, car mechanics. If, after reading this special issue on trance mediums, you suspect that you, too, may have the spiritual ability to be a receiving trance medium - allow other spirits into your body - or a sending trance medium - give your own spiritual energy so intensely as to engulf another's body - you may wish to communicate with others like you. You are welcome to write to us about your experiences and abilities. We are offering the pages of Psychic Life to start a new reader service of linking up persons who would like to communicate. - editor.

Astral Date

This is the first time I have written to the author of anything, but I found your story in "Psychic Life" (Vol. 2 No. 2 - Beth DeRose Norman's story on astral travel) so interesting and so timely that I just could not resist.

I have been interested in psychic abilities for years but have not yet demonstrated many of my own. Anyway, I received a hypnosis cassette tape designed to teach me Astral Projection the same day I picked up the latest issue of "Psychic Life" with your story in it. I have been using the tape daily and hope to get results soon, but it would sure be nice to have someone hold my hand the first time out.

Here is hoping that we can correspond to get to know each other a little, and possibly set up an Astral date -

Love and light, Sam.

Your letter has been forwarded to the author. We are not an astral dating service, but wish you luck anyway.

Hyperactive

Dear Editor:

I am psychic and have a hyperactive son. Susan Hull Bostwick's article on hyperactivity (Psychic Life, Vol 2, No 3) was very disappointing. Her attitude regarding this condition is typical of uninformed educators. Hyperactivity is not a lie. Since Susan did not include basic facts of her subject area, I offer them

There are more than five million hyperactive children (mostly boys) in the United States and they constitute the majority of patients seen by child psychiatrists. Hyperactivity is often hereditary. All of the boys born, from my generation, on the maternal side of my family (i.e. my son and his male second cousins) are hyperactive.

Yes, hyperactive children are usually bright and Kundalini is one of the factors involved. An important other factor is diet, particularly ingestion of synthetic additives. Hot dogs are the worst, as they are loaded with artificial flavoring and Red #2 (not to mention nitrates). Ingestion of food additives causes drastic emotional outbursts in hyperactive children. Another fact about hyperactivity is that it is an innate condition involving "misfiring" of chemicals known as "neurotransmitters" in the portion of the brain that controls attention span. Observation of one misdiagnosed case of hyperactivity does not facilitate accurate judgement. I put off having my son take any medication for years. A few months ago he was failing the second grade because he couldn't sit still long enough to do any work (incidentally, the second grade is the most difficult and symptomatically cumulative for hyperactive children).

My son's capable pediatrician prescribed ten milligrams of Ritalin to be taken once a day. This is a minimal dosage. Shots seem like a radical treatment to me. Physicians and researchers know more now. My son has had an entirely favorable experience with this medication. (Capable healers only barely minimized his condition.) He has made a complete change from failing to receiving a wonderful report card in just two months. Most importantly, he told me how much better he feels. He never appears "drugged" and is happy about himself. By the time he is nine, the Ritalin will no longer be needed. I chose this course of action, weighing it against the fact that my seven year old, who does square roots, fractions and ratios, would otherwise have to be put back into the first grade or maybe even kindergarten.

So, please let us drop the stigma of treating hyperactivity with medication and considering it some fault of parents, which are attitudes imposed by ill-informed educators and others.

One should be conscious of all the facts before making sweeping generalizations. Being psychic does not predispose us to perfection or infallibility. We can receive 6th and 7th chakra information, yet interpretations of this information are subject to our particular frames of reference.

I believe it is important to incorporate scientific data with psychic realities. Too often we, as psychics, speak in an exclusive cosmic jargon that earns us labels such as "space case" and "flake," because to others we are not relating through common worldly experience. Instead of condemning the medical profession (subtly or not) for being spiritually obtuse - would it not be better to induce a synthesis of the two factions? Psychics are excellent diagnosticians (and could work well with physicians), but would you go to one if you had appendicitis?

So, how grounded are we? Do we talk about it, feel self-satisfied, and then fail to demonstrate grounding? To Susan I say, investigate - contact the Feingold Association of Marin and draw your conclusions in a psychically inductive manner rather than a deductive one. To all of us, as psychics, I say let's be less of a subculture and more willing to respond in the world and to it.

Thanks for sharing your experience, but I still will stick to my guns: we do not need to mold the child through drugs to fit an inept educational system.

A Grave Experience

Laurie Schryver, I read your article on "Why you need more B Vitamins." I thought the article very good. I take High Potency Stress Formula Vitamin B with my other Vitamins and minerals.

Is there still some reason why I am not more balanced? Why doesn't negative energy roll off like oil? Water off a ducks back. Why do I not see everything. Ah ha, I finished reading your article again. Do you have recommended Foods? Thank you.

I had my first student reading at the Washington Psychic Institute, 7/80. Then

I started having prolific or unusual dreams. I never went back. I meditate. I visit with my dog 'One'. She passed away November 20, 1980. I meditate near her grave. Later I see a different brighter, growing world. Cody, my other dog, squeaks and I get my perspective back. It's nice to know there are other people just like me on earth.

Thank God! I do.

Sincerely,

Margaret R. Sutter

An Isolated Psychic

Why I'm here I don't know. I wrote a letter to the Universe tonight asking for help. I'm truly confused. I have been to many readers, from palm readers to the best spiritual channels. I myself am a channel of one known as Master K.H. and have also had a visit from Seth himself. I write and speak. I hear and see at times. I have seen gross astral beings to beautiful visions. But I'm still confused. I've studied metaphysics for 2 ½ years now, and feel lately I have grown too fast in consciousness. I am given messages so deep that no one can understand them. There is no one to talk to here. Spiritually I'm very sad. I have no support from friends or my husband. They couldn't possibly understand what I receive anyway. I work with Light constantly, I have been a channel for healing energies, I can honestly say that I feel a power inside me which scares me at times. I can bring energy to my hands that people find amazing. But I don't care about that. I am finding out that the more I understand about spirituality, the more I see there are no people yet that are even close to knowing what spirituality really is. They seem to be so far away from it.

I have to tell you of a dream I had just the other night. I was preparing my childrens' room and I was painting a wall in beautiful water colors. I looked behind me and my father was lying in a twin bed reading a book. He was gold and beautiful, that side of the room was warm with gold light. He told me someone was trying to get into the house. I looked out the window and a pack of wild black dogs raced to the window at me, it didn't frighten me at all. I turned around suddenly and one of the dogs got inside the room. But as I looked at him he laid down immediately, he was gray and black and had a horn on his head and a short horn behind it. I looked out the window again and a small Winnebago drove up and it started to snow and a man stepped out in a white robe holding something in his hand that was red. He waved his hand and the dogs ran away. My father said someone was at the back door. I opened the door to the room and looked down the hall and saw a chair and it was gold and green, beautiful with that gold light around it. The End. I do know what it meant except for the horned dog. But to continue, I need a friend. I need someone who cares even for someone who is a long walk away. I wish I could visit your Institute so much. I need to learn. But I'm not able.

ASYLUM FOR THE INSANE.
NAPA CITY, CAL.
1869

In 1869 the State authorized the first national and international study of insane asylums. As a result of the data collected on the management, the different modes of treatment and the statistics of insanity of the asylums of Great Britain, Ireland, France and Germany and first hand investigations of one hundred and forty-nine insane asylums, the state approved plans to build its first asylum.

Nine years later there were 500 patients in the new Napa insane asylum. By July 1st, 1881, two thousand nine hundred and fifty-five patients had been admitted. One thousand four hundred and forty-three had been discharged, four hundred and fifty-eight had died and thirty-three had escaped, leaving one thousand and twenty-one patients in the asylum.

History of Napa County

"Parens patriae" is the English law at the time of the settling of the American colonies that gives the King general guardianship of all "infants, idiots, and lunatics." This is the basis for the State giving itself control over our lives today. After all, the State knows that we are all either infants, idiots, or lunatics, and therefore we cannot even go to the bathroom by ourselves. We need laws to keep us from destroying ourselves. Do you ever get the feeling that the state is insulting you? Someone always seems to be trying to convince us that he knows more about what is good for us than we do. This is called the game of "Here, let me control you since you're such an idiot/lunatic." I bet one of these days a lot of people are going to stop putting up with that type of legalized insult and invalidation. Actually, it is not legal. No one has the right to take away your civil rights: your life, liberty, or pursuit of happiness. Invalidation of your right to heal yourself and to help heal others is illegal and unconstitutional.

One lady I know gets out of her car at a certain place often. However, as she exits she has no idea how she got there. She doesn't even remember getting into the car. Another lady is a perfectly happy, capable lady except for a week every six months or so. She has no idea what she does for that week. She has no recollection afterwards. Her friends report her to the psychiatric hospital emergency ward because she is seen running up and down the street stark naked preaching the Bible. Yet another lady, in the middle of a conference, rolls her eyes, stiffens, and begins to convulse. A few seconds later a booming male voice comes out of her mouth giving instructions, or she begins to speak in a foreign language she never knew.

I know a man who can't hold down a job. He doesn't even know why he gets fired except that every once in a while he "comes to" as if he was caught dozing off. People look at him strangely or begin to accuse him of things he never even thought about doing. He starts to drink heavily to "clean his mind of images and voices." These people are all having a problem handling a spiritual ability called trance mediumship.

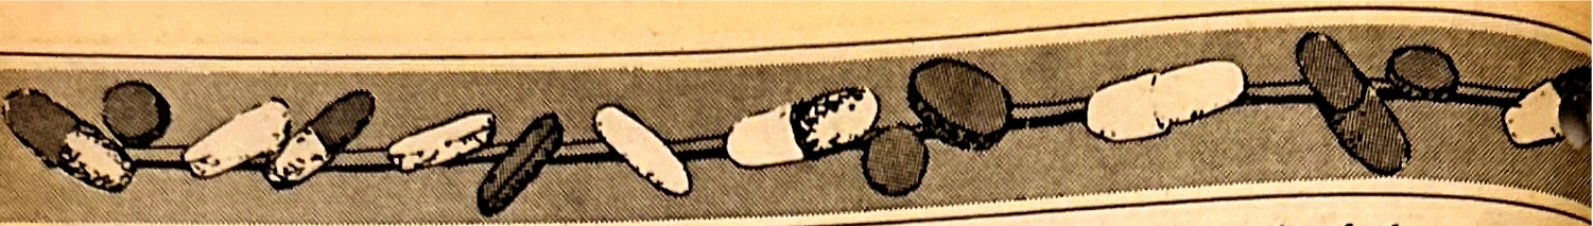

Trance mediumship is the spiritual ability of getting out of the body and allowing another spirit to possess it. (See article on page 18). There have been great healers and teachers who used this ability among them - Edgar Cayce, Arthur Ford, Madame Blavatsky. In fact, religions have started following the teachings of trance mediums: Jesus, His Apostles, Mohammed, Mary Baker Eddy, Joseph Smith, and many others. All of them had tremendous capacity to use spiritual energy.

Many successful businessmen and professional people are trance mediums. There are countless musicians, artists, and dancers who are trance mediums. Because of their energy and abilities, trance mediums are usually the ones who are controlling, on a psychic level, everybody around them. There is, however, another story about trance mediums. Those who are not able to handle their energy and ability fill the prisons, mental institutions, and the streets. Countless convicted murderers have said, truthfully, "I didn't kill him! I don't remember even having a gun." Many of them attempt suicide in prison to "shut out voices" in their heads. One murderer was instructed by a spirit in a dog to kill people. Some who have experienced a bright light enter their head and heard a voice, thought that that spirit was God and proceeded to fanatically obey everything the voice told him. Lack of communication and information prevent many of these people from healing themselves and gaining control over their abilities.

What happens to these people is that a foreign spirit enters and takes possession of their bodies or parts of their bodies. A "full trance medium" who allows another spirit to totally take over his body is not aware of what happens while he is out of the body. When he returns, he has no recollection of what transpired. A "direct-voice trance medium" maintains more awareness but gives up control of his vocal apparatus to another spirit. The psychic surgeons in the Phillipines relinquish their arms and hands during their healing sessions.

Where can a person who experiences his trance mediumship and does not understand it or is unable to control it go to receive help? Unfortunately, for so long, the medical profession has convinced many people that it knows all of the answers - or if it didn't, only the AMA can hope to find the answers. And, the legal and law enforcement agencies of our government have taken upon themselves to become "therapists" in "correctional facilities." In order for trance mediums to control their spiritual abilities and energy (whether or not they are convicts or psychiatric patients or others in need) punishment and invalidation must be eliminated. Both the medical and legal professions through the agency of our government advocate "hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil." What they cannot handle, they lock away and try to convince everyone else that healing and justice is going on.

The medical and legal professions have made spiritual ability into numerous incurable illnesses and crimes. Just look at how many people who are using their abilities are treated as criminals and diseased. Through imprisonment, drugs, and invalidation, the physical symptoms are suppressed, but the spiritual problem that causes them is not solved, but worsened. We know the answer to your problem, says the AMA, and the law enforcers, and that is to lock you up.

What diseases and treatments have been created by the medical profession to prevent trance mediums from learning to heal themselves and control their abilities? Epilepsy, narcolepsy, anorexia, manic-depression, psychosis, schizophrenia, phobias, alcoholism, just to name a few. Not all people who have these problems are having them just because they cannot control their trance mediumship. Not all of them need strictly spiritual help - they also need the medical help as well. But medical treatment alone for those with a spiritual problem does not solve the problem. Many times, it may even worsen it. Many trance mediums have convulsions. These convulsions have to do with the raising of the body vibration and the entering of another spirit. Certain drugs, such as Phenytoin (Dilantin) and/or Phenobarbital (Luminal) are prescribed to most of these people.

"The objective of therapy is complete suppression of symptoms, though in many cases this is not possible. Epileptics may continue to receive anticonvulsant therapy throughout life." (Current Medical Diagnosis & Treatment 1982)

For the "epileptics" who have nothing wrong with them except for their out of control trance mediumship, there is no cure on the medical level - only a "suppression of symptoms."

When I worked as a psychiatric nurse at a hospital in San Francisco, out of the 27 or so patients on my floor, I would say 24 were out of control trance mediums. The other three had brain tumors or parts of their brain missing. Treatment for these people consisted of drugs and extremely invalidating "therapy" sessions. The energy in the hospital was horrible. At that time, I didn't know most of what I now know about spiritual healing. But I did know that I was able to communicate with many of these people fairly well when no one else on the staff was able to even get a response. I would get permission to organize a "therapy" session and have a sing along instead. The energy came up in the room as well as everyone's awareness and ability to communicate. When Eddie would sit up on the edge of his bed to talk with Aunt Edna, I could see her, too. The main difference between Eddie and I was that he was stuck on his psychic experiences and I wasn't on mine.

Last week I talked with a psychiatric nurse who admitted a young lady who came in for a check up. When the patient got into the psychiatric ward, "she literally went bananas". After she got sedation injections, she said "I can't handle the weird vibes here." Her diagnoses - "schizophrenic." Schizophrenics I have encountered were all trance mediums. Because spirits literally attacked them, these people became unaware of their physical needs. By the time they seek medical help, many times they do need not only spiritual and nutritional help, but medication as well. But medicine alone does not solve the problem - and again, many times worsens it.

"Hospitalization is often necessary ... Antipsychotic medications are the treatment of choice." (CMD & T, 1982)

There is a great deal of fear in experiencing trance mediumship, as well as watching someone going through the experience if you don't know what is going on. A young lady begins to shudder and starts to talk in a deep male voice, then changes to an old bitch, then acts as sweet and kind as can be. One time I saw a very proper lady who all of a sudden started growling and spitting, crashed into the walls, and then sat down prim and proper; "As I was saying ...". She continued in her conversation as if nothing had occurred. We had exorcised a spirit from her.

Jesus taught how to control trance mediumship abilities and how to heal those who are possessed by another spirit. The AMA is trying to convince us, sometimes through forceful means such as arrests and legal entanglements, that spirit does not exist. Do you think they are saying Jesus was a fraud? And that the AMA is above the Bible and God?

Even though the medical and legal professions try to convince us that they are using legal channels to stop us from healing ourselves, many times their legality is quite questionable. Both the Federal and State Constitutions give us the right to heal ourselves and to use our spiritual abilities. Furthermore, there is a state law that a person being healed cannot be forcefully committed to a mental institution.

"No person who is being treated by prayer in the practice of the religion of any well-recognized church, sect, denomination or organization, shall be ordered detained or committed under this chapter unless the court shall determine that he is or would likely become dangerous to himself or to the person or property of others, or unless being a minor, his parent or guardian having custody of his person shall consent to such detention or commitment."

(California, Welfare and Institution Code, Judicial Commitments) ☆

She Has Six Beings Who Come and Go

A Medium's Nutritional Needs

An Excerpt From A Reading

Trance mediumship places special stresses on the body. In order for the owner of the body to leave and another being to get in, the body must 'charge up', and increase its vibrational level. Sometimes this can manifest as trembling, or a feeling of tremendous energy surging through the body. Psychic Life asked Rev. Jeff Johnston, a nutritional aura reader and teacher, to do a special nutritional reading on a trance medium to try to pinpoint some of the conditions created in a body when different beings are entering and leaving it. We would like to summarize parts of this reading; even though it was aimed at one individual, many of the comments apply to trance mediums in general.

This lady (we'll call her Alice) is a practiced trance medium. She had at least six different beings coming through her body to communicate amongst themselves. She is an actress, and - like many performers - uses this ability to create very convincing characterizations!

Unlike many trance mediums, her body has a great amount of certainly about its own strength and unity, so she can allow these beings to come and go without feeling unsafe. Like other trance mediums, she has a tremendous amount of energy.

THE READING

When a trance medium is 'revving up' to allow another being into the body, the connection between the liver and the pancreas, which controls the blood sugar (i.e., body energy) is called upon to create large bursts of energy. In Alice's body, there is a physical connection between her liver/pancreas, the adrenal glands, and the center of her head. Sometimes when she is looking for a high energy level, the blood sugar level is pushed up, which causes stress in the body. This turns on the adrenal glands, the liver releases stored glucose, and the pancreas tries to control and regulate the blood sugar. After the stored glucose is released, the liver says, "no more", and the brain goes into a panic, say, "Hey, I need that blood sugar", and Alice gets a migraine. (The stress of trance mediumship in other bodies can cause many other physical problems - hypoglycemia and diabetes are often related to this spiritual 'problem'.)

Jeff recommended high doses of desiccated liver to help her liver rebuild itself; also high doses of Vitamin A and E, and bottled pituitary supplement to help her lung problem. (The fast pace of her adrenals created a drying effect on the lung tissue).

Jeff also spent some time looking at Alice's 'setup' to be a trance medium. Long ago, when the genetic and cellular patterns were being formed, she was 'evicted' from another planet she had been connected with. She is programmed - even on a genetic level - to be able to communicate very easily with spirit, and part of her work this lifetime is gathering up her lost information and healing herself. Her communications with these beings, who are also connected to that planet, aid her.

Healing work was done on some energy that affected Alice at the time of her conception. There was a lot of tension between her mother and father, which created a push-pull effect in the fetus, and set her up for a complex dichotomy in her personality - another factor in her trance mediumship.

A: I think I bought into some programming: "trance mediums shake and voices come out of the bodies," and stuff like that. I saw my beings, and said "Whoa, I'd better not bring them through - I have a hard enough time saying hello to people as it is."

J: Yes, when you invalidate your trance mediumship, you stop owning it, and you lose a little bit more control. I see your twin standing to my left. Your energies are similar enough that there's not such a drastic change for your body when the twin comes close.

A: At a TV commercial workshop, the director said, "O.K., I want you to be someone you are not, and I'll only call on you if you can present a character who is not you." First Effie came through, and she was real nervous. And I wanted total contrast, and that was Andrea, my twin. I just let Andrea do her thing! As a result, the producer called me - rather Andrea - to do this improvisational skit. That's when I could really acknowledge that she had so much sexual information.

J: Yeah, there's more permission to be on a sexual level with Andrea. I'm looking at six or seven beings that you have traveled with as a group through several universes.

A: Oh, dear. I suppose that's why I've settled into wanting to use my trance medium levels. And as an actress, I have total freedom to allow all of these beings to have what they need.

J: What is tremendous for you, and for all of you (laughter), is that you have a body with enough certainty about its own strength and unity that it doesn't freak out when another being comes in. ☆

LEWIS SPEAKS

A Spiritual Problem

COMMUNICATION and BEING CRAZY

by Rev. Lewis S. Bostwick

If you don't understand crazy people look at our language. It really doesn't explain in any detail what's happening to our emotions and how we're experiencing them. The lack of communication is fantastic. Yet, it is very easy for anyone to get one's attention by the words, "I know how to make you more aware or more capable" or "I know how to cure your inability to communicate." From the first time your mother taught you how to say "Daddy" and "Mommy", until the time you graduated from high school to college and into your first job, everything that was taught to you was about how to communicate.

The unfortunate thing about all of this is that there are so few people out there aware of the fact that many people cannot communicate because they are not in the body. There are different levels of people being out of their bodies, from those who can't hear, to those who can only feel sexual emotions, to those who lose their ability to communicate (crazy). Most "craziness" did not originate with a physical problem, but a spiritual one.

When a spiritual problem presents itself to the physical world, that is to say to a physical body, it is usually an out of body experience. When the soul leaves the body and that body has not been trained how to handle that experience, it experiences such things as total horror, total terror, total loneliness, total confusion. How does the person who is having this problem get an answer and to whom does the person go for help? The traditional avenues are clogged with ignorance and good intentions. Most agencies can not comprehend what a person is talking about. There are two places a person usually goes: the local Christian church or the medical complex. Yet sensitives and psychics are not heard there because the truth is more fantastic than the fantasy. Nobody believes you.

I'd like to deviate to talk about ancient history. Those who had seizures and whose body went into convulsions used to be known as seers. When the body starts to jerk and gasp for air, the being has left the body. The eyes roll upwards to a small area in the forehead in which there is a space where the soul and the genetic entity of the body communicate. When the body can't find that part of itself which gives itself all its answers, the eyes roll upward to see what happened to the other part of itself. One of the abilities of a soul personality is that it is always being something. So that when you are in your body, being a body and operating at a very capable level, and some chemistry or short circuit suddenly ejects the being out, everybody else around becomes frightened.

What the ancients found out was that a new personality then entered the body. They also became aware that they could ask this new personality some questions. This is the same thing that happened to Edgar Cayce. When he left another being entered and talked and answered questions. This was called "Life Readings."

Well, I guess you know we have gotten out of total communication with the medical complex, the Christian complex and all the other rigid communication stoppers because if you have not experienced it, you cannot be in a compassionate, sympathetic space with the person who has. This raises legal questions of how does one explain to the law, a jury, judge about a young man who is a kleptomaniac only at low tide. At high tide he kills. Why, of course, he's crazy. I hate to admit it, I'm very aware of what some people are going to say: all isn't love and beauty on the trip towards heaven. Only to the heaven within is the trip successful and a beautiful experience. Read the words of Jesus. Not the words of his disciples.

(Dr. Lewis Bostwick is founder and president of the Church of Divine Man. He has trained trance mediums Donna Flegal, Michael Symonds, Helen Palmer and about 400 others how not to be the effect of their trance medium abilities, but how to control and use clairvoyant abilities. He has worked with trance mediums for more than 15 years. ...editor)

A Car Gets a Healing

by Judith Meites

As I pulled my car into the parking space at my friend's house, I felt something "go wrong." It felt as though my car had been sucked into a vortex of dark energy. Sure enough, when I tried to start the car, it turned over but didn't catch. Oh no! I tried to start it, grounded it, revved up my energy and jammed it through the engine, begged the Supreme Being to do it for me, brought in an assortment of beings ... nothing. So much for creating in survival! I had my friend push the car to the nearest service station where the mechanic tested for all the obvious problems, and diagnosed a $300 fuel injection job. I didn't have $300, and I did need the car. What to do? It was two days before Christmas, with all the usual general hysteria ... not such a good time for a rush repair job! My friend pushed the car to the nearest parking space. I put some protection around it, to keep people's attention off it, and so it wouldn't have the "abandoned car" look to it, and went home for the night.

The next morning, I called my regular mechanic, a creative healer in agreement with my mockup to keep my car running fine at minimum expense (it took me a while to find him!) and he drove out to work on my car. He tried replacing parts, rewiring, and so on - no luck. The fuel injection problem was too complicated for him to work on - but he wasn't sure that was actually what was going on.

It was now Christmas Eve. I figured I might as well try to heal the car myself - nothing to lose, anyway. I started to work (from my house) on cleaning out the energy of the car, my own pictures that had created this situation, my picture about healing a car (how weird!) etc. - and when I felt I had done all I could, I asked my healing master to stay with the car, keep it protected, and work on it. From time to time, I checked on the car on a clairvoyant level, and the energy around it seemed to be lightening up quite a bit.

It seemed appropriate to create a special Christmas healing, and I started to set that up in my mind. I decided to wait until Christmas day to try the healing, and to use Christ force energy to do it. After mocking up the healing, I started to take my energy out of it so I could enjoy Christmas.

At about 6pm on Christmas day, my friend and I went over to my car. I was a little nervous about healing a machine. I mean, what if it worked? We sat in the car and meditated. I tried to start the car, just to see if maybe it had fixed itself - nope. I started the healing - I could see clairvoyantly approximately where the problem was, and whose energy was causing the blockage, and I started to clean it off. My friend - in good agreement with this creation - was able to see when I got stuck and help me get back to neutral (once I got stuck in survival and needed to turn down my first chakra, once I got lost in the middle of the invalidating energy around the car - etc.). After working for a while, I started the car--it felt a little closer to starting, but still did not "catch". We worked some more - this time on connecting up the wires, and doing some repair on a physical level. (I was getting some good advice on this from a spirit friend of mine who loves fixing cars!) Again, I tried to start it - it didn't start, but it seemed to be very close. Then I began to channel Christ force energy through my body, and through the channels in the car that needed healing. The energy changed noticeably. After a couple of minutes, I turned the key again - and the car started. It certainly put me into a hell of a growth period! Since then, I have had several amusing experiences healing my own and other people's cars.

Male

When a man experiences a female trance medium something always happens. He either runs or stays and has an "interesting" experience; the experience of being totally engulfed by the energy of a female.

A trance medium runs a lot of energy. Usually she is trying hard to survive and be safe in her own body. The way she does this is by running her energy through anybody who will let her. When a man has this energy run through his body, he experiences becoming part of her survival. Everything suddenly revolves around her survival patterns. It's time to be amused. Too late to run.

To a male body, this high vibration of female trance medium energy will translate into fear; fear of crossing the street, fear of going outside, fear of talking to people, fear of being seen, fear of change. There is no rational reason for this fear or even an experience to explain it. It's just there.

Now as a man experiences this energy running through his body, he may start to lose track of himself, of who he is and what he's doing. He starts to compete with everyone and everything. "How come they've got it so good? How come I'm not like everybody else? I better catch up." He may experience anger inside himself and start to trash himself for not being a perfect man.

How does a man handle this experience? Many men will start to turn off their awareness. They start to become bored and in apathy and literally hide in that energy. It is here that many men become trapped. They are in boredom and wish to change, yet every time they make an attempt or even get the consideration about changing they feel that survival energy from the female trance medium.

When a man experiences this energy of a female, he is experiencing the game of being possessed. The way not to be controlled by this energy is to be amused at the game.

And you don't have to run. -Richard Lawrence

Male Bodies can Feel Engulfed

Female

To say that someone is a trance medium conjures up images of "speaking in tongues," schizophrenia, seances, or other scary images. What trance mediumship actually is, is the ability of the being to leave its body and allow another being to enter the body.

Why would a being, perhaps a relative, guide, or someone from a past life, want to enter a female body? This has to do with the high energy which a female body can handle. The energy produced by the female reproductive organs is one of the highest vibrations on the planet.

If a woman is not using and directing the energy of her body to create what she chooses (either to knit, build a bridge, make a baby, or whatever), there are a lot of beings, with or without their own bodies, who are very happy to use it for her! With most women, this process of allowing someone else to use her energy begins when she is young. Remember some of the energy we got as children? "Be nice." "Share your toys(energy)." "It's impolite to say no." Most of us tend to have a hard time liking ourselves when we are not acting sweet, kind and saying yes, yes, yes. Very few of us received the permission and validation to create for ourselves, and to own our own power.

What happens to a woman who has a being enter her body and plug into her female creative energy? The body will try to create what that being tells it to. If the being is a male being, the body may begin to produce more male hormones.

With a female being, the woman may feel "out of control," or have a million unsolvable problems, or feel she does not know what she is doing or why. I have also seen this trance mediumship manifest as physical problems as well in the female organs, such as infections, cysts, or even cancer. One of the "symptoms" of trance mediumship in women can be irregular, lengthy and uncomfortable menstrual periods. All bodies operate best on their own information. Having another being run that body is like putting the wrong fuel in your car. It may run ok for a few blocks... -Christy C. Lynn

Children Are Psychic

"Where Are You, Who is There?"

by Susan Hull Bostwick

The first time that a trance medium experiences a being entering the body may be during childhood. Many adult trance mediums can recall their initial spirit experiences when they were small children,

This is the story of Janet (not her real name), a trance medium who came to the Ying Yang School for psychic children in Santa Rosa, Calif., at age three. Her mother enrolled her in the parochial school because she was aware of her daughter's special abilities and wanted her to learn how to control and utilize them. Trance medium behavior which manifests itself in a small body is also a concern of parents: how do I interpret tantrums, fits, self-destructiveness? Yin Yang School is unique in that it provides counseling for all parents on a regular basis and in the form of aura readings for the entire family unit. (See the next issue of Psychic Life for the full story of this unusual school.)

Janet entered the school with two clearly recognizable beings playing hop-scotch with her head. One was pityful and liked to hide in corners and alternately pout, scream and throw unprovoked temper tantrums. The other was nasty and liked to challenge every adult and child that was kind: "you can't sit here. Get out of here, stupid. I don't like you. I hate you. Get out of my way. What are you doing here?" Sometimes there would be loud demands such as "get me this, I want that, where is..."

It was difficult to relate to the real being of Janet when these other two characters entered - she was also a very good actress and could imitate one of the two regular visitors or invent new ones if she thought the game would be interesting enough - and it was difficult to like her. The being Janet was near genius in abilities. She could count, spell, write, sing simple rounds from memory, and easily perform academically on a five-year old level. Her art work was colorful, detailed and intense. In this sense, Janet was a teacher's dream: she could perform well.

On another level she was a nightmare; her games were an everyday battle. When she brought Pityful through her little body, she could evoke sympathy and compassion - she worked adults over with agility - and cause a grown person to feel torrents of guilt. But when Nasty came through, revulsion occurred.

The teacher - without going into guilt and self trashing - had to work to the limits of human patience and understanding to help Janet rid herself of these two intruders. "Janet, where are you?" the teacher would ask when Nasty came around. Or, "Janet, who is there?" when Pityful was hiding in the corner crying.

The spiritual training program of the school teaches even three year olds how to recognize spirit. Through this training, Janet began to realize the existence of the beings in her space and how they were doing her harm. Allowed to run amuck, the visitors would destroy her social interactions - her peers simply didn't want to associate with her - and cause adults to painfully dislike her. The school staff worked with the family to help Janet overcome the spiritual problem and take more control of her own body.

Besides allowing other beings to possess her at times, which disrupted her learning process and that of others, she also had the ability to levitate things.

The first time that she revved her energy and allowed another being in - revving is a usual activity for starting to allow possession by another spirit - she was in a very angry state at not being allowed to sit at the lunch table. The visiting being, using the extra anger energy of Janet's body, tipped over the 50-pound, four feet in diameter lunch table from a distance of about five feet away from the table. All of the lunches spilled - to the utter amazement of the three other pre-schoolers, none of whom were touching the table.

The real question is: which state psychiatric hospital would she be in today if she hadn't received some spiritual help? How many experimental drugs would have been poured into her? (If any of you know of children like Janet who are in institutions now, or of parents who can't handle their children, please contact Susan at Psychic Life.) ☆

Healing at the Psychiatric Ward

When psychics visit hospitals to heal the sick, they usually go disguised as the patient's relative, good friend or as a straight traditional-type man/woman of the cloth. They don't go as psychic healers.

Even when visiting my own mother-in-law, I've had to be very careful not to be obvious about being a healer. No trance medium behavior allowed (revving up energy, shaking). Even simply sitting straight in a chair; hands on knees; feet on the floor; eyes closed was a stance that attracted hospital personnel faster than the bedside buzzer.

If the patient was a trance medium or had a recognizable spiritual problem (talking out loud to no one visible to others, answering unspoken conversation) the energy awareness of the staff was heightened by a psychic's presense. "How are they going handle being in the same room with that crazy?" Usually the drugs administered by the hospital sedate the patient enough for social mores to be followed. Still, the question can just hang in the air.

I once visited a psychiatric ward in San Francisco to see a friend who had admitted herself (She is a trance medium who was born 100 years too late in the wrong country - she should have had a salon in Paris in the middle of the 19th Century). She knew she was over the edge of reality and was coming home again through the sedating drugs and psychiatrists' help.

Like many trance mediums she had obtained some answers - the oneness of the universe; there are no accidents; you create your own reality; and watch out what you ask for - only she got totally stuck in creating. She temporarily lost her ability to destroy or rid herself of her creations. She also had been receiving messages and white light prayer energy for some time - until the channels all got jammed. The white-light prayer energy ungrounded her and too many spirits were giving her advice in the middle of her crown chakra.

What she asked for was a "hello" into the middle of her head - one being to another - recognizing her tremendous capability as a spirit and as a body. When she got enough "hellos" she left the hospital.

The second time I visited a psychiatric ward, it was as a minister. The relatives of the patient begged Rev. Lewis Bostwick, director of the Berkeley Psychic Institute, to go and see "Terry." I went along. She had been a seminary student. The most interesting part of the experience was the game Terry was playing and the psychic awareness of the other patients in the reception room. Terry knew who we were but refused to talk or even recognize verbally that we existed. She held a cup of coffee in her hand and simply stared into it silently. I noticed the other patients startle and move away in fear as we entered the room. When we looked for a spot to sit down and talk with Terry, three chairs immediately became available. Looking at Terry, I saw a lady who had always been well-to-do, who never had to work, who was play acting a trance medium game to the hilt. She was not spaced out or dopey. She was clearly there in her body, playing a game and quite angry that we dared to enter center stage with her and steal a scene. She held that coffee cup as a trained actress ready to throw it at us intruders.

We left amazed at how good she looked knowing how wretched she had looked before, and how miserably sick most of the other patients were.

Is she a trance medium simply acting out a trance medium game? It looked like it to me. How long was she going to fool "them" in order to keep getting the State's "crazy" money - a stipend for the mentally diseased.

This brings up the question of acting out trance medium behavior - performing as a medically determined mentally diseased person when what you have is a simple spiritual problem - a "disease" the A.M.A. won't admit.

Once a lady was possessed of a being for many years. She complained to psychic healer and clairvoyant Lewis S. Bostwick of getting no help from the medical complex. She had spent $25,000 and was still the same. She came to Lewis as a last resort. In a matter of minutes he removed the being and she was well. It cost her no money and she made no donation. - S.H.B. ☆ or a medical problem?

Trance Mediums in the Churches

In this two-part article, I would like to talk about trance mediums and how most churches were started by a trance medium.

PART ONE

What is a trance medium for starters? In the dictionary a medium is described as "an agency such as a person or an object by means of which something is accomplished, conveyed or transferred. Or a person thought to have powers of communicating with the spirits of the dead."

So if it is a person through which something is accomplished, conveyed or transferred, that person is being used to pass on information.

When I, as a psychic, look at mediums, I see that it is the spirit or being of that person who is using the body as the medium to communicate its wishes, needs and creative projects. The spirit also communicates to other beings within bodies. In this simple respect we are all mediums.

A trance medium, on the other hand, is a being or a spirit with a body who relinquishes his or her control over the body to another completely different spirit. The spirit who owns the body moves out and allows another being without a body to move into the body and take over the control and direction of that body. This is a good definition of a trance medium as far as I as a psychic see it.

It is also a good definition of a schizophrenic, or a person with multiple personalities. As the original spirit moves out of the body and another totally new being moves into it, that body's personality changes drastically. This is also why trance mediums can't remember what they did while that other spirit was using the body.

I just ran across a definition for abstracted fugues (an extremely forgetful person) as: A pathological condition during which the patient is conscious of his actions but on return to normal has no recollection of them.

This is also a very basic definition of a trance medium. He has no recollection of what happened when he "returns to normal." Some "absent minded professors" or very creative people are this way.

In many churches we are admonished and encouraged to let the light of God and the Spirit of God come within us and let His will be done. This is the making of a trance medium. Allowing a spirit to come within you and take over your decision making process and your creative abilities is just asking to be a trance medium. As far as I am concerned this is just asking for trouble.

God gave us our freedom. He wants us to have our freedom. He didn't ask you to move over so that He could run your life for you because He knows so much more than you do.

He gave us the freedom to experience life in all its beauty and complexities and to create and make mistakes as we will.

Also all those beings floating around out there without bodies are usually bored and will say anything to get you to let them control your body for a while. Would you put your trust in a stranger who walked up to you and asked you to do something and when you asked why you should do it were told "because I'm God"? Or would you trust someone who suddenly appeared in the same room and announced his sainthood and intention to now run your life for you the "right" way?

If you wouldn't think of believing a person like that, why should you believe any being without a body who comes along and pulls the same stunt?

But this is precisely what happened in the history of many churches. It is a very common occurrence. As a matter of fact, many churches were started by a trance medium.

This is not to say that there is something wrong with any church started by a trance medium. In all these religions there are many good things to be found. A lot of people out there have found something precious and valuable within them. Just as I have with my spiritual beliefs within the Church of Divine Man.

Joseph Smith, who started the Mormon Church, was a trance medium. He communicated with the Angel Moroni, and many other spirits including John the Baptist, who gave him information on the correct way to lead a spiritual life.

As a boy of 16 he saw his first spirits who told him that all the churches which he had attended and hadn't found any answers in were wrong, and that when he was a little older they (the spirits) would return and give him a new church. In the meantime they told him to continue reading the Bible.

At the age of 18 they appeared to him again and told him where to find and dig up several golden plates with strange writings on them.

The spirits showed him how to translate this writing and this information became the foundation of the new church.

It is amusing to me how psychic Joseph Smith was. He continued to communicate with the spirits until his death. And each Patriarch (or head of the church of Mormon, called the living prophet) is a psychic. They communicate with God and several other beings while at prayer. It is most amusing to me that they won't believe in psychic abilities and consider them evil. The Mormons have a very special blessing which the Patriarch gives each Mormon once in his life. Really it is a psychic reading. In getting a Patriarchal Blessing you learn what your goals in this life are, where you are descended from and other information about yourself.

This type of blessing - reading is not new. Jacob gave his 12 sons such a blessing

- reading before he died. He described each son and prophesied what his future would be.

In Genesis 49:1 it says "Then Jacob called his sons, and said 'Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you what shall befall you in the days to come.'"

Also within the Old Testament there were quite a few trance mediums.

Aaron, the brother of Moses, was one. And Moses himself allowed the spirit of Jehovah to take over his body and decide what he should say to the Pharaoh and others. This is in Exodus when the Israelites are going to leave Egypt. Moses was afraid that he wouldn't be able to convince the Pharaoh to let them go. Moses said he was never a great speaker and Jehovah replied, "Who hath made man's mouth? ... have not I, the Lord? Now therefore and I will be with thy mouth and teach thee what thou shalt say."

And when Moses further insists that he doesn't know what to say, Jehovah tells him to take along Aaron. Jehovah says, "And thou shalt speak unto him (Aaron) and put words in his mouth: and I will be with thy mouth: and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do."

This goes on throughout the Bible. Moses is talking to Jehovah, a spirit, which is a psychic ability, and he allows this being to control him and his actions. Moses is a trance medium. He allows the voice of Jehovah to come through him.

It is amusing that all these wondrous psychic events take place in the Bible, within the Mormon church and within many other churches, too.

Jesus was a tremendous psychic. He cured trance mediums. He took out a spirit who took over someone else's body.

Luke 4:33 describes this event. "And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil and cried out with a loud voice saying, 'Let us alone, what have we to do with thou Jesus of Nazareth? Art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; the Holy One of God.' And Jesus rebuked him saying, 'Hold thy peace and come out of him.' And when the devil had thrown him in the midst he came out of him and hurt him not. And they were all amazed (the people in the temple watching) and spoke among themselves saying 'What a word is this! For with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits and they come out.'"

Movie Review

Mommie Dearest is a significant story of a secret trance medium. It is significant in that it is a typical trance medium plot: Original Being leaves, new Being enters. Only the action scenes vary. The famous and now infamous main character, Joan Crawford, is portrayed as a closet alcoholic who puts on a good face at work, is always on time, does the job and leaves promptly at 5. No one would suspect that the sweet public demeanor hides a very sick and deeply troubled other self that came violently crashing forth in private.

The much talked about movie was Crawford's adopted daughter's rendition of her family life. The public and most of Hollywood believed she was just a normal spoiled brat. What happened at home to Christina was a nightmare of hellish child beatings, torments and sheer evil.

It is impossible to discuss the movie without comparing the book. The power of the written word is so strong (my husband could not finish the book) compared to the movie that any comparison makes the movie look silly. It seemed that the watered-down movie version was the best Hollywood could do - especially when it perpetuated the Crawford public image (beautiful, charming, loving, giving). Hollywood offers the milk toast version of Christina's horror story and nearly makes her complaint look a bit frivolous: after all, don't most children suffer from some form of punishment for which no one can explain? Parents aren't infallible. We all know that.

As a psychic I see Crawford as a possessed woman. And therefore she is blameless for the actions of her "other self." She didn't ever know what that other being had done. How could she? She wasn't home. The other being is evil, punishing, destructive - the dichotomy to Joan herself. Joan could create and didn't know how to destroy - rid herself of her creation. The other being was totally destructive - didn't know how to create.

This story is the typical trance medium game: a being enters an otherwise nice person, nice person leaves and other being causes havoc. Family life is destroyed. Peace and happiness are destroyed. Love is destroyed. Yet, how many thousands of people could not finish the book either? How many people really do know from experience what Christina is trying to say?

Is Christina simply a child victim of a vicious psychic attack? Did she play some part in the trance medium game? I believe so. I saw her as determined to control and because of that continued to be stuck in the game. Her brother, on the other hand, left Joan Crawford as soon as he was able, not willing to have any part of it.

Although it was published almost ten years ago, the book that stands out in my mind on the theme of trance mediums is Sybil, written by Flora Rheta Schreiber. It is a true story, using the pseudonym Sybil I. Dorsett, of a woman who had sixteen different personalities, and the amazing healing that took place during her years of psychoanalysis.

Sybil's mother was also a trance medium, diagnosed "schizophrenic." She was a violent woman, ambivalent about and fearful of having a child. She would do such bizarre things to Sybil as give her cold enemas, tie her to the piano and bang cacophonous tunes, beat her, and trip her so that she'd fall down stairs. She was secretive and Sybil dared not admit her mother's mistreatment. Her father was the weak bystander who saw not, heard not. (The battered child is often the product of a schizophrenic, fearful mother and a helpless father.)

Sybil was an incredibly capable psychic. She learned to deal with situations she couldn't handle (violence, secrecy, veiled threat of punishment) by leaving her body and allowing any one of sixteen other personalities (beings) to occupy her body. Sybil would "leave" during these occurrences and not remember them when she came back. After the death of her grandmother, the only relative whom Sybil felt liked her, she was "absent" from grades 3 to 5! She "woke up" one day in the "wrong" classroom. She had difficulty with her multiplication (which she had supposedly learned) for years afterwards.

Sybil's personalities were dramatically varied. One was Vanessa, a French woman from a very large family, well educated, an artist who liked high society and made friends easily. Another was Peggy Ann, who got angry. Sybil had no ability to express anger, so when she felt angry, Peggy Ann came in. Then there was Ruthie, a two-year old baby; and Mike and Sid, two young boys who talked about growing up to be carpenters "like Grandpa." In all, there were fourteen females and two males.

The book describes Sybil's therapy sessions with a female psychiatrist who understood working spontaneously with Sybil's own healing ability. Each personality was dealt with separately so that Sybil could bring each of those needs into present time and dismiss the personality. As this happened, Sybil regained all the information about her "lost time," including her multiplication tables. Sybil could then acknowledge her own capabilities and spend more and more time in her body, eventually gaining full control over her trance mediumship abilities.

What made this book so incredible for me was the author's ability to capture the feelings that a trance medium (and I am one, too) goes through when that energy is out of control - the fear, confusion, and mostly the feeling of "something wrong" but never being able to put it into words. The book may not be available at many book stores, but try your local library. I found it in the library in Santa Rosa. The reader gets a great healing as Sybil goes through hers. ☆

Typical Trance Medium How To Tell If You Are One

In some circles, trance mediumship is talked about in hushed tones as a "special gift" bestowed by God upon some very spiritual person. In others, it is the work of the devil.

How do you know if you've experienced trance mediumship? In one sense, everyone is able to receive a spiritual entity into the body: you (the being) got into the body you have now!

Here are some signs of trance medium abilities:

1. spacing out and feeling a "take over." (Can be characterized by a large mass of energy felt leaving or entering the body on or near the top of the head.)

2. hearing voices inside your head or receiving "messages"

3. doing something with the body that you can't remember anything about later. (Many people have this experience when drinking) Not guilty

4. finding yourself acting in a way that is "not you"

5. in women, out-of-control menstrual cycles

6. paranoia, a strong sense of being controlled by others

7. having a lot of energy and knowing that you are controlling the lives and destinies of others

8. unexplainable changes in your personality, voice, clothes

About the Authors

Caitilin Goodsell

Caitilin Goodsell first acknowledged her psychic abilities when she was 17 and shared a vision with her mother. They were driving through the beautiful rolling hills of upstate New York when at the top of the rise they did a simultaneous double-take at an empty field. Superimposed on the spot was an old house. After they went home and when they shared their sketches of the mysterious house, they discovered both had seen the same apparition. Stranger still, when they later re-visited the sight on foot they discovered actual foundation remnants that exactly matched their own drawings. Caitilin never stopped drawing, and sketched her way through Cornell University with a B.A. in fine arts. Often she found herself drawing "imaginary" people. It wasn't until she came to the Berkeley Psychic Institute that she realized she had been drawing her own spirit guides. Presently she does spirit guide illustrations as part of her professional psychic readings and is a freelance commercial artist. Her regular column, Spirit Guides, appears on page 28 of this issue.

People think too loudly. I don't know how I hear them, but I do; somewhere in my head. At first, I thought I was just imagining what people may have been thinking, especially when they looked particularly angry or bored, but then the words of their thoughts started coming through very clearly. One day, to test myself, I tried answering someone's question to herself; "I wonder if I should go back and buy that sweater?"

"I think you should buy it, it's a lovely sweater," I said. BAM!! It was like a punch to the stomach. I knew I needn't test myself again. I could hear all right - hear everything - no doubt at all. No need to make a fool of myself, or get sluggish again like that. And I felt I was different for being able to hear.

The times when I had to be most careful were when I was riding on the bus. In the silence, everyone's thoughts boomed out loudly. It was funny to watch people who wouldn't say hello to each other have incredibly animated non-verbal conversations. Unfortunately, the bus was my main means of transportation around Berkeley.

Many times I've seen people think so loudly as to cause things to happen. They'll stick out a thought, as if it were a foot, and trip someone. Or they cause some hurrying old lady to drop all of her packages. I've often seen people wince in pain as if they'd been physically slapped. The worst of these thoughts I have seen have caused car accidents, where the guilty party threw his thoughts at two innocent cars, causing them to collide, while he sped on by.

I soon learned to see that many other people could hear also. Their reactions were very subtle - usually just a jerk of their head, or a step back. They would catch themselves before it would register into their consciousness that they had heard something.

Sometimes what I heard was too loud even for me. I would feel a very odd pressure right between my eyes which would lead to headaches. But I tried real hard not to space out. I felt that spacing out would be more dangerous than suffering the pain. Sometimes it helped to imagine little earplugs to cut down the noise. After I would get home, I could relax and the pain would go away. I could heal myself quickly by putting my attention right where it hurt the most. At first, it seemed to make it hurt more, but after a few minutes, the pain would disappear.

Another way I had of healing myself was to spend time with my unicorn collection. Even I was amazed by the size of it. I had 84 unicorns of all sizes, colors and uses; ceramic ones, posters, pillowcases, candles, stuffed animals, tapestries, and cookie cutters. I had started collecting them way before it was fashionable to do so. There was something about them that I couldn't quite put my finger on. I felt as if each one of them was trying to tell me something. It was a vague memory of feeling like I knew how to fly or how to turn a prince into a toad. But I couldn't remember what it was that I knew. Even though I was always adding to my collection, I could tell you about every single unicorn item - where and when I got it, color, size, where it was sitting in my house, everything. It was as if each were an old friend. My collection also gave me a sense of having something unique - very different from most unicorn collections. But I could never quite put my finger on what it was that made me feel that it was so unique.

Then one day I was sitting on a bench at Vine and Shattuck, waiting for the bus, of course. A man was walking by behind me. I wasn't paying attention to what he was thinking until he was past me and did a double take. I could feel his attention very strongly on me. He walked back, sat down, opened a book and started to read. But his thoughts came right at me.

"Hello! Hello! I know you can hear me," he thought loudly and excitedly. This caused me to do a double take. No one had ever thought "Hello" directly to me.

"No, you don't have to look at me, act nonchalant."

But I was so taken aback that I didn't know where else to look. I really wanted to talk with this man.

"Why don't you just talk to me?" I said out loud. Some other people waiting for the bus looked up quizzically to see if I was talking to them. I looked quickly at my hands and blushed. Embarrassed for what, I didn't quite know, until I realized that it was their thoughts for me to be embarrassed.

"It's safer for me to communicate without talking", the man went on. "I could tell that you would be able to hear me by a symbol over your head. And the reason that you can hear is that you are a different kind of being in a human body."

"What?" I knew that I was different but it had never occurred to me that I might be an alien.

"No, you are not an alien," the man thought at me. "You belong on this planet as much as any other being here. You are a very sensitive type of being. It's rare for us to take on a human body lifetime. It's very dangerous and makes it easier for them to catch us. Our own bodies were destroyed during the great energy annihilations around 800 A.D. which led to what is known in modern times as the Dark Ages. Much knowledge and information was destroyed at that time. There really were spells for putting people to sleep for a hundred years. Besides being dangerous, it feels awkward for us to take a human body because they haven't evolved to the point of being able to have as much information as we were able to have in our old forms. The human body is sensitive, but there is a gap between the perceptions and the brain. This is why all perceptions get analyzed and become almost useless. That is why most humans cannot quite consciously register that they 'hear'."

"What were our bodies like? Before they were destroyed?", I asked.

"We were Equus caballus unicornis. Unicorns."

Silence. Something inside of my mind clicked.

"Even though we risk our souls by taking a human body, many of us are taking them at this time because it has been a very long time since we felt the wind and the rain and the beauty of the physical world. We take these human bodies but most of them are not quite capable enough to let us remember who we are and why we took the body in the first place. We gain the experience of the physical world, yet lose ourselves."

"Do human beings in human bodies have the same problem?", I thought to him.

"Yes, but many of them are evolving and having more knowledge too."

I looked up quickly at him as I thought, "How do you know this? How did you find out?"

"I was discovered by one just as I found you here. Some of us who took human bodies did not forget. Now that I've reminded you, your "vision" will quickly return and many other things that you've forgotten."

"Like being able to turn princes into frogs?" I asked.

"I think that information has been destroyed. If you should remember, it would be a good sign. You'll remember many things and will be able to see other people with the symbol over their heads. You'll see other symbols also."

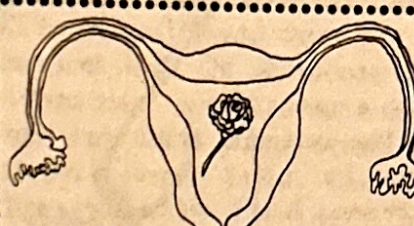

"At first you will want to try to change things, but don't. It will give you away. And it is not for you to change the games on this planet."

I looked up and gasped as I saw the brilliant horn from his head right between his eyes. It was twisted like a fine rope, and came to a sharp point. It shone lightly and strands of gold embedded in it reflected twinkling lights.

"Now you know why you collect unicorns. They are old friends of yours. You were trying to remind yourself but your human body couldn't quite have the information. In fact, it probably did its best to deny it. There are a few of us here now, that is why the unicorn knick-knacks are so popular. Meetings are too dangerous. Even thinking to you here; I've taken the necessary precautions. It is best to meet between lifetimes. There is nothing you have to do, I'm just reminding you who you are. Just enjoy the planet while you are here and tell others with the symbol who you may see."

At that, he got up and walked quickly away. I looked after him. All of the sudden, I heard the blast of a horn and jumped. I had the sensation that the noise had woken me up, but I didn't think that I had been asleep. I know I had been talking with someone. It was a very disconcerting feeling.

I got on the bus and put fifty cents into the box. Even in my grogginess, I felt a sense of clarity, the usual bombardment of noise and energy on the bus didn't bother me. I worked my way to the back of the bus and shook my head to clear it as I saw a beautiful woman sitting there. She had long, auburn hair, delicate features and from between her beautiful eyes was a glowing unicornian horn. ☆

Hello, Healing Master!

"Meade"

Rev. Cathlin 1981

Guides

by Caitilin Goodsell

Jeanne is a recent graduate of EPI's Beginning Healing class.

Jeanne: I asked for this reading so I could find out about my new healing master, and to make sure she's a good match for me. I feel a little uneasy with her at this point.

Author: Let's review your agreement with her. Tell me what that entails for you.

J: Well, her job is to help me do healings and to give me information as we do them. She's supposed to do this from outside of my aura, except that she plugs into my hand chakras. I'm to be the boss - tell her when to come and go and what to do in the healings. Also, that she keep her energy in affinity with mine and with my healees.

A: So far, so good. Now call her into the room.

J: ... okay. Is she there?

A: Oh, yes. She's in your space a bit; it looks like you give up seniority to her on a healing level. That's what makes your body nervous.

J: Seniority - like she knows more about healing than me? But I thought that was why we got healing masters.

A: No, her job is to facilitate the communication between you, as a spirit, and your healee (ditto), which results in them being healed. So take back your seniority, say hello to her, and remind her to get back out of your space.

J: ...okay. Boy, that feels better. But does she know about healing anyway?

A: She's showing me a recent past life ... I'm seeing her living in a very hilly wooded area, looks like Spain or maybe France ... working with a older woman, learning about herbs and natural remedies and such ... there's a picture of her losing a baby in childbirth ... this was her first female body, it looks like she hadn't gotten all the bugs worked out yet ... so she's got all that herbal, etc. information, but she still has a lot to learn about what makes bodies tick. That's why she chose to be a healing guide, and to work with a female (you).

J: What does she look like?

A: The valence she's showing me is of a young woman with a short haircut, real cute. She's wearing a robe cut like a friar's habit, but white and very soft and fluffy. On an energy level she shows as a bright, bright blue - very volatile.

J: Is her energy in affinity with mine?

A: Have her plug into your hand ... when she does that, she changes to a slightly less 'charged' blue and adds some green ... the new color matches a level of body affinity with you. In other words, yes.

J: Does she have a message for me?

A: Ask her yourself.

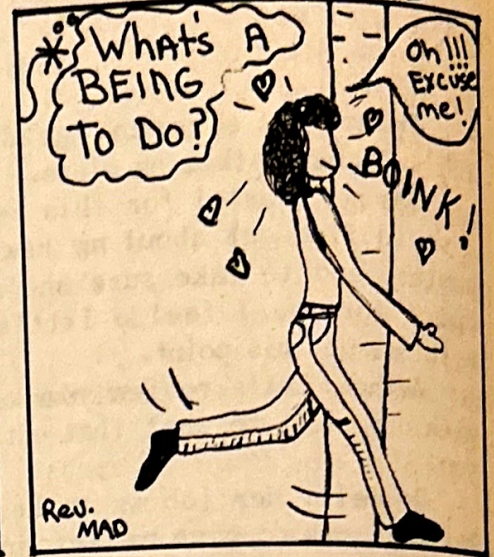

J: ... she just says, "Hello, Jeanne". Her name is Meade!

A: Well, be polite!

J: Oh! (laughs) Hello, Meade! ☆

Sixth-Grade Psychics

by Paki Stedwell

From time to time, various demonstrations "proving" the existence of psychic phenomena (for those needing proof) are held in the Bay Area. A couple of years ago, I attended one held by a well-known psychic and IBM scientist, Marcel Vogel. The demonstration's purpose was to show, using bright and receptive 12- to 13-year-olds as guinea pigs, that everyone has demonstrable psychic abilities.

Topics for Vogel's class were telepathy, metal bending, dowsing, rocks and crystals, and psychometry. I soon saw that Vogel was a powerful transmitter. Many of his experiments were very impressive; however, it seemed to me that his results were influenced by his energy coming into the children's spaces. What I found missing was him remaining in neutral and maintaining a good separation of his energy from that of the children he was working with. Perhaps his goal to "prove it" got in the way.

Vogel started off with a story about a man who got 83 miles to one gallon of gas (in a car that normally got 19 m.p.g.). This man focused his attention on a small cardboard pyramid suspended over a glass of water and a thin lead to the gas tank, and thought about wanting to increase his gas mileage. Talk about a mock-up for our times...

Then Vogel did a telepathic experiment. Selecting at random from ten envelopes, each containing a simple picture, he told the class to take a deep breath (to get them into their bodies) and see what images they got. The first time around, two kids got a direct hit (the picture was one of those smiling faces) and several others came in close, with a circle or a face. Each image got about the same results, except for one boy, who got four or five exact replications. (I got only a few near hits, but I was keeping a rose over the top of my head to protect myself, whereas the kids let Vogel climb right in and march around.)

Before the metal-bending demonstration, Vogel said that the key to using psychic powers was in relaxing, not rationalizing, before focusing and taking a deep breath. He had several kids stand up and hold spoons.

"Tune yourself to the metal," Vogel advised them. "Rub one spot until it starts to feel sticky. When it does, you will be able to twist it around in any shape, like butter."

Within a very few minutes, the class produced at least a dozen pretzelized spoons, some even tied into knots. It was quite dramatic, and the kids were beaming with enthusiasm at their abilities. Holding up a spoon whose handle had been twisted off, Vogel warned, "If the power of your minds can do this, imagine what negative thoughts about someone can do to them." While he meant his words to be cautionary, I wondered about the effect of unleashing a class of pre-pubescent psychics on the world.

Next, Vogel did a fascinating test for metal and jewelry selection that can also be used for food, clothes and colors. Basically, it's a test to determine your affinity with something. Vogel tested the reactions of one subject at a time to several stones he had on hand: a quartz crystal, a cat's eye, a turquoise ring, and others. Holding the object in the left hand and then pressing it to the chest area (the heart chakra), the right arm was held straight out from the shoulder. After taking a deep breath and closing his eyes, the youngster concentrated on the question, "Is this object good or bad for me?" Vogel then pushed down lightly on the extended arm. If it dropped, the answer was negative. If it remained extended even after several of his attempts to lower it, the answer was positive. Vogel's point was that a lot of things we wear exert strong influences on our energy and overall attitudes.

Vogel continued with dowsing ("locating something with your mind"). Using two thin metal rods bent at the ends to form a 90 degree angle, Vogel sent different kids walking across the front of the room with the rods in their hands. The rods dipped toward the ground at the same place in the room, no matter who was holding them, probably indicating, said Vogel, an underground waterline. His explanation for the phenomenon of dowsing, which can locate metal and other substances besides water, was that the chemical components of water, even from far underground, create a magnetic field to which the muscles in the human body react. The rods simply register this reaction.

A psychometry experiment came next. Handing a young subject an old Mayan artifact, Vogel asked him to focus in on the object in his hand and see what he picked up. The boy started describing where it was found, how it was made and what it was used for (a symbolic decoration for a chief or priest's headdress). But as Vogel further explained the artifact's use as an "information transfer, a symbol of power being transmitted from generation to generation," it was clear to me that the youngster was being fed information directly from Vogel as much as from the object itself. I felt uneasy about this experiment's validity.

As a wrap-up to an admittedly dynamite show, Vogel produced a little quartz crystal ball and invited the class to project themselves into the ball with him. I followed until Vogel started some basic programming about loving and helping each other, and using their extraordinary powers "in the service of mankind, to be good citizens and let the power of the Lord come into and work through you." I figured I already had enough programming about what to do or not to do with my life, and wondered again about the total effect of the class on the sponge-like psyches of these sixth-graders. At the same time as Vogel introduced the kids to an exciting new world, he did several things that made me question his methods. At one point, he told the kids that "you can kill people with your mind," adding that there were ongoing top-level experiments in Russia about the possibilities of "psychic warfare." Somewhere else, he strongly advised against fooling around with Ouija boards, because the kids could plug into "dangerous earth plane forces." How many kids would run home to try and do just that, in spite (or because) of his warning?

All in all, it was a fascinating, rewarding evening. On the negative, he laid some fairly heavy trips on them and left them all with fragments of his considerable energy in their spaces. On the plus side, Vogel showed approximately twenty sixth-graders how easy it was to tap into their substantial psychic powers. It occurred to me on the way home that a good way to end a class like this would have been to lead the kids through a clean-out, followed by a healing on their upper chakras, but I guess that's my perfect picture.

(We wonder what he may be the effect of this experiment on kids. Anyone having experiences with psychic children are welcome to respond ...editor) ☆

Creating Wellness in Your Body

By Thelma Meltes

How can you create wellness in your own body? We all operate through "pictures." Pictures are energy creations or concepts of what we are, or are not, or should be, etc. Sometimes we have other peoples' pictures in our space, which make it difficult to make changes or heal ourselves. This may come out as "rules" - "Eat this. It's good for you." (Never mind how it tastes.) "Don't go for a walk in the rain." "Take a laxative if you don't have a bowel movement every day." (How many of you hate prunes because they had to be taken as a laxative?) Or it may come as a "program" from a parent or a doctor - "Your health always has been delicate." "You'll have to learn to live with this." "Your family history shows a tendency toward ..." Or an ethical picture - "It's selfish to think of yourself first."

Pictures that create wellness allow you to enjoy and like your body. (After all, you created it, you might as well like it.) When you enjoy your body, you validate its ability to heal itself. The body knows how to heal itself simply by allowing the life-force energy to flow without being stopped by the resistance of negative pictures, such as rules and programs about your health, or pain pictures. (Next issue: How To Get Rid Of Pain) Life-force energy flowing freely through the body creates a feeling of wellness and enthusiasm, a feeling of "raring to go".

Trusting your own information about your body means listening to your body and what it says about your need for sleep, kinds of food, sex, exercise, and when it needs to be pampered. And those needs may be different every day! Is this the day for a ten mile hike? Or a day to take it easy? The time for a huge meal? a small one? none at all? Talk to your body and listen to the answers. Make sure they are yours!

Another wellness picture: it's OK to solve my own problems and to let others solve theirs. In my healing classes, we have a mantra: "I AM NOT RESPONSIBLE!" This is hard for some people to understand because they want to help. Looked at from an energy point of view, it's something like this: my engine runs only on its unique brand of gasoline (my energy). If someone tries to help me or solve my problem by pouring their leaded gasoline into my unleaded tank, (putting their energy in my space), the engine sputters and gets clogged up (confused). A great help that is! Now if this person helps me instead by saying, "Oh, you know your carburetor needs adjusting and here's a tool you can use if you want to," then I can listen, decide if that makes sense, and adjust the carburetor if I want to. I might even feel like letting it sputter for a while longer while I fix my flat tire. In the meantime, my friend has not used up any of his gasoline. He simply offered me a little communication, some information about how to solve my own problems. After all, each of us creates problems to learn from!

What does all this have to do with wellness? How many people do you know who have burdened themselves with chronic physical problems (arthritis and backaches are two common ones) as they take on responsibility after responsibility? We see many people in healing clinics (especially women) who need to let go of other peoples' problems before they can give their own life-force energy to themselves and be healed. Is it really selfish to give to yourself, to use your own life-force healing energy for wellness? What a strange picture. You, the being, created your body and know how to communicate with it, what it wants, and how to make changes in it. And someone says to you, "No, no. That's selfish." So you are not allowed to give to yourself but must try to solve someone else's problem. It is as though you could know the answers for someone else.

Another way to create wellness is to picture your body and its organs, muscles, etc. as healthy and well. Create your own pictures! Put a gold sun over your head and let the sunshine be your own healing energy. Fill your body with it and feel the wellness. Have faith. Be well. ☆

by Saul

This small glossary hopefully will dispel some confusion about psychic slang.

Akashic Records: located in the cosmos; a center of the evolutionary records of each being in the universe.

Aura: energy of spirit emanating from the body.

Being: the immortal spiritual self. The spirit.

Center of Head: that space in which you, the spirit, are most aware in the body; located behind the eyes.

Certainty: having the awareness of the difference between the truth and the lies.

Chakra Sanskrit term meaning wheel, symbolizing the seven major energy vortexes in the body from the crown to the arches of the feet.

Clairvoyant: someone who sees light rays, energy, auras, symbols.

Ghost: a being who has dropped the body, become stuck on the earth plane, embroiled in that body's pictures and experiences and is presently unable to grow and evolve.

Grounding: connection to the planet.

Guardian Angel: a being who protects one from harm on an energy level.

Meditation: communication with your spiritual self and the God of your heart.

Ownership: claiming of your own space. The state of beingness in which you are certain of what belongs to you.

Running Energy: process of channeling cosmic and earth forces through the body for meditation.

Seeing: experiencing energy on a visual level. A clairvoyant "sees" not only the physical world more clearly, but the spiritual as well.

Space: as in "she invaded my space". A psychic lingo term for aura or the sensitive energy of a body.

Supreme Being: God. Creator.

Third Eye: located in the center of the forehead. A type of opening and screen through which a clairvoyant views energy. Also called sixth chakra.

KUNDALINI

by Francesca Blondo

This is a new column on Kundalini questions and answers. Rev. Francesca Blondo, teacher and practitioner of Kundalini energy, is on the staff of the Berkeley Psychic Institute ... editor

Q: What is the heat I feel in my body when my Kundalini is on? And what's a good deodorant to use with Kundalini?

A: It sounds like your Kundalini energy is flowing through you as a healing vibration. When the body is in a state of spiritual or physical healing, change, usually a slight rise in temperature, can be experienced. Sorry I can't suggest a deodorant, but when you find one let me know.

Q: Why don't I feel the heat everyone talks about? And how do you spell the word?

A: Heat in the body when you run Kundalini energy can be a sign of a healing state, a block, or a picture clearing out of your space. When you meditate with Kundalini, it sounds like you are not running into any imbalances in your space. The word is spelled K-U-N-D-A-L-I-N-I and rhymes with fettucine.

Q: Does Kundalini energy enhance having sex?

A: Kundalini energy is very validating for the body. When this energy is flowing clearly, the body is in a state of affinity; that is, you like your body and feel good about being in it! When you run your Kundalini energy this way, it can enhance sex, sports, singing, dancing, listening to music, etc. Those things that are enjoyed through the senses of the body.

Q: Why is Kundalini such a feared energy?

A: Mostly, because of too much bad news coverage. 90% of the written accounts of Kundalini are related from a negative experience, not a positive one; hence people believe that the same bad things happen to everybody experiencing Kundalini energy; which creates the apprehension and fear. Also, very little practical, present time, grounded information is available, so it remains an unknown subject. Many people fear the unknown. Kundalini energy is wonderful stuff! Write me some great experiences and I'll put them in this column.

Q: Can you explain Kundalini in simple terms?

A: Kundalini is an energy that connects the spiritual and physical parts of you. It flows throughout the entire body, but at certain times it collects at the base of the spine and runs up the spine. When this occurs, Kundalini opens and balances the seven chakras, and rises up towards the top of the head, where it flows out.

Q: Is Kundalini energy safe to use all the time?

A: Kundalini is a great meditation and healing energy when you are grounded to the Earth. When you aren't grounded and run Kundalini energy, your body can feel unsafe and unable to handle the strong psychic vibrations that go along with Kundalini.

Q: Does Kundalini help in clairvoyant development?

A: Yes. Kundalini helps to open and balance your psychic centers, enabling you to better be aware, use and control your clairvoyant abilities.

Q: Why does my Kundalini turn on when I get angry? It also turns on when I'm real enthusiastic - but I feel guilty!

A: Everybody has "Kundalini buttons," and when they get pushed, the energy will turn on. Your buttons sound like anger and enthusiasm! You might reflect on "who makes you feel guilty when you are enjoying!"

Q: What do snakes have to do with Kundalini energy?

A: When a psychic looks at Kundalini energy running up the spine, it can abstractly look like a snake uncoiling around the spine. It is a picture symbol used to describe the way the energy appears to a clairvoyant. ☆

What Color Is Your Aura Today?

Hello. To read your aura, I ground myself, run my energy, and go into trance, a heightened state of awareness. I use my Clairvoyant abilities and see your aura as layers of flowing colors. You have quite a lot of colors in your aura, which tells me that you are a very capable and creative person. Close to your body, I see a layer of bright green. Your body has been undergoing extensive change and rebuilding. The next two layers in your aura are predominantly yellow. This is you intellectualizing: "Why is that the answer?" You are not satisfied with the way your family is. You are the peace maker. The other members of your family do not seem to be getting along. It is difficult for you to see this happening. Many people around you are "stabbing each other's backs." Being the healer you are, you also have difficulty observing all of the competition and jealousy. You also have a bright violet around the body in the fourth layer, about 20 inches out from the body. This is your spirituality and understanding of who you are. You are actively on your path to self-integration. Around this is a blue-green layer. It looks like you have recently gotten back your enthusiasm and zest for life. You are ready to cause trouble in the world! Around this is a very rich purple. This indicates to me a tremendous commitment to your goals of teaching and healing others.

- Excerpt from a Reading -

Maybe it's time you had a reading. For an appointment call (415) 548-8020. Learn to use your own abilities - we have beginning classes and workshops, as well as a one year seminary training. Psychic Abilities Demo - Tuesdays, 2 - 5, Berkeley.

SPIRIT PHOTOS

Joy Gruenwald, a graduate of the Washington Psychic Institute in Seattle, sent this 110 Instamatic print of herself Thanksgiving, 1981, with her mother standing behind. Her son, Todd, took the picture under normal flash conditions. Psychic Mary Jackson reads the energy like this: "I see two or more beings in Joy's space. It looks like Joy is a trance medium and attracted a baby being into her left eye. It appears to be stuck there by her mother's energy. Her mother wants her to have another baby."

Do you have any of your own spirit photos you would like to share with us? We would like to publish reader's photos as space permits. Along with your picture, please include any information about the circumstances of the picture, such as, what you saw as you took the picture. All photos will be returned, if mailed with a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Mail to: Psychic Life, 1591 Sebastopol Road, Santa Rosa, CA 95401.
